THE PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION CLEARING HOUSE was established in 1931 to serve as an exchange for information, experience, and ideas among organizations of public officials and others in the United States and Canada which are engaged in the active work of planning for improvements in the administrative techniques of government.

It has been financed for its ordinary needs by special grants of funds so that it makes no general appeal for memberships or contributions. It exercises care not to engage in any activity that is being carried on by an existing organization. It has no political objectives, no political schemes or plans to advocate or to oppose. Its sole purpose is to facilitate the exchange of knowledge and experience useful to public administrators.

THIS is the sixth edition of Public Administration Organizations, a directory of voluntary unofficial organizations working in the general field of public administration or in fields that impinge upon and affect public administration. It has been compiled for the use of these organizations themselves, public officials, and students of government, as a guide to sources of information.

This edition is similar in scope and arrangement to preceding editions, the changes being chiefly those necessary to bring the directory up to date.

The principles which governed the selection of the organizations listed are outlined in the Introduction. It should be said here, however, that this directory includes not only organizations composed of public administrators but also those which, by cooperation or the joint occupancy of particular fields of work, affect the course and practice of public administration. Some organizations within the directory's scope may have been omitted, because they were overlooked or undiscovered by the staff. Others have been omitted because it was impossible to obtain sufficient information concerning them.

An effort has been made to exclude from this directory organizations which are not what they purport to be. However, the listing of an organization or agency is not to be construed as an endorsement of its objectives or a guarantee of its competence.

Additional information concerning any organization listed in this directory may be obtained by direct correspondence with its secretary.

HERBERT EMMERICH, Director

July 1948

“The Americans of all ages, all conditions and all dispositions constantly form associations. They have not only commercial and manufacturing companies in which all take part but associations of a thousand other kinds, religious, moral, serious, futile, restricted, enormous, or diminutive. The Americans make associations to give entertainments, to found establishments for education, to send missionaries to the antipodes, and in this manner they found hospitals, prisons, schools . . . Wherever at the head of some new undertaking you see the government in France or a man of rank in England, in the United States you will be sure to find an association.”

—ALEXIS DE TOCQUEVILLE

INTRODUCTION

I. Scope of Directory

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION ORGANIZATIONS is a directory of unofficial organizations in the field of public administration in the United States and Canada. It is designed to guide public officials and others concerned with governmental problems to sources of useful information and to identify organizations which impinge upon or affect public administration. All of the organizations listed can be placed in one of the following categories:

1. ORGANIZATIONS OF OR FOR PUBLIC OFFICIALS AND ADMINISTRATORS

A particular effort has been made to list all organizations which fall within this category. Organizations of public officials have exerted an important influence in the significant improvement in public administration which has taken place in the United States during recent decades. Such organizations are particularly useful because of the wide variety and relative independence of jurisdictions providing public services in the United States. Voluntary associations not only provide much needed facilities for interchange of technical information among officials of the same jurisdictional level, but also foster such interchange among federal, state, and local agencies which have problems and interests in common. These organizations are promoting voluntary cooperation, formulating and securing the wide acceptance of improved administrative practices, and in other ways providing in the United States a substitute for that complete centralization of authority which has taken place in many other countries.

This directory includes only organizations which are understood to be voluntary or unofficial in character. Commissions, committees, and other agencies variously named, which have official status and are commonly listed in government directories along with government departments, bureaus, and boards, are not within the scope of this directory.

2. PROFESSIONAL AND TECHNICAL SOCIETIES

Many societies built around a profession or technique important in some particular phase of public administration have been listed. As public administration is drawing increasingly upon the professions and technical specialties for skilled personnel, practically all such organizations have a significant proportion of publicly employed members. In fact, some of them are so largely composed of public officials and employees that they might be placed in Category 1 above.

3. CITIZEN ORGANIZATIONS

There are a great many organizations of private lay citizens which devote attention to some phase of public administration or to problems which are of concern to some public officials. In fact, the range of governmental activity is so great that it is hard to think of any association which could not be placed in this general category. An effort has been made to select from the innumerable citizen organizations which exist in this country those which are of most importance to the field of public administration. However, it has been deemed either necessary or desirable to exclude arbitrarily citizen organizations of the following types:

- a. Political parties and groups organized to lobby for particular legislative measures.
- b. Business, labor, trade, and industrial associations, except some of the larger and more generalized and those which parallel an established field of governmental activity.
- c. Fraternal organizations, lodges, and business men's luncheon or service clubs.
- d. Religious bodies and their affiliated organizations, except a few of the larger organizations under religious auspices which are concerned broadly with social welfare matters.
- e. Philanthropic foundations.
- f. Universities and similar institutions and their affiliated schools, institutes, and bureaus.
- g. Business firms.

The above statement outlines the general categories or types of organizations which have been included or excluded from the scope of this directory. Certain geographical limitations also have been observed. In the first section, "National Organizations," groups which include Canadian as well as United States members have been listed. Some of these use the word "international" in their name. However, organizations which are international in the sense that they are federations of national bodies are outside the scope of the directory.

Only organizations which are at least state-wide have been listed in this volume. Although organizations which are no more than city- or county-wide are frequently larger and more active than many state-wide groups, it has not been deemed practical to compile for the entire country a directory of local organizations which would be comparable in scope to the present volume, and hence no local organizations have been listed.

II. Number of Organizations Listed

This directory lists and describes 565 national organizations. These may be classified under the three general categories described above as follows:

Organizations of or for officials and administrators.....	134
Professional and technical societies.....	290
Citizen organizations.....	141

It should be pointed out that many of the organizations are difficult to classify and might be placed in more than one category.

The fifth edition of this directory, published in 1941, listed 1,905 organizations as follows:

National Organizations....	556	Regional Organizations.....	81
State Organizations.....	1,194	Canadian Organizations.....	74

The corresponding count for the present edition is 2,381.

National Organizations..	565	Regional Organizations....	80
State Organizations.....	1,654	Canadian Organizations....	82

There has been a greater change in the list of national organizations than the above figures indicate: 36 organizations formed during the past seven years and 35 older organizations are listed for the first time; 41 organizations listed in the last edition have since disbanded or become inactive; 17 organizations listed in that edition failed to respond to repeated questionnaires and are presumed to be disbanded or inactive; 7 organizations listed in the last edition, and presumably still in existence, have been omitted as outside the scope of the directory.

The increase in the number of state organizations listed is due in part to the inclusion of the state affiliates of several additional national organizations.

III. Explanation of Descriptive Statements

Summary statements have been prepared only for the national organizations. These statements are similar in form to those which appeared in the previous editions of this directory. In every case, the organization was given an opportunity to correct and revise the statement prepared by the Clearing House. In a few cases, however, these statements were later edited to bring them into conformity with the style used throughout the directory. Although information concerning the organizations listed was secured from sources believed to be reliable, the Public Administration Clearing House does not undertake to guarantee the accuracy of the information in this volume.

A uniform style has been followed in drawing up the summary statements. Under the caption Membership is indicated the type of membership as well as the number of members. Constituent means that the organization is made up of corporate or quasi-corporate bodies and that membership is formally limited to such groups; company, agency, organizational, and institutional are terms which mean approximately the same as constituent, but have been used in cases where they seemed to be more appropriate. Corporate indicates that the organization is legally incorporated, and membership is limited to the directors or trustees mentioned in the charter and their successors. As used in this directory, corporate does not mean that the membership is made up of legally incorporated bodies; in the latter case the words constituent or company have been used. Individual means that membership is personal and usually, but not always, that membership is open to all who are qualified; ex officio is the term used to indicate that membership is automatic by virtue of the occupancy of some position or office, representative is the term used to indicate that the members have been selected to represent various groups and interests.

The material relating to the dues and staff is presented under the captions Finances and Secretariat. The number of staff members is the average number of paid employees, not including the chief executive officer.

Under the caption Activities, an attempt has been made to describe organizations in terms of what they do rather than in the more formal terms of their constitutions. Committees and sections have been listed in this paragraph, as their names frequently throw considerable light upon the range of interests of the group.

The length of the statement required to describe an organization gives little or no indication of its importance or significance.

IV. Acknowledgments

In securing the names and addresses of organizations believed to be within the scope of this directory, many sources were consulted. Most of the books and directories which were found to be helpful are listed in the Bibliography.

In the development of its informational facilities and resources, the Public Administration Clearing House has had the invaluable cooperation of the following organizations: American Municipal Association, American Public Welfare Association, American Public Works Association, American Society of Planning Officials, Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada, Council of State Governments, Federation of Tax Administrators, International City Managers' Association, Municipal Finance Officers Association, National Association of Assessing Officers, National Association of Housing Officials, and Public Administration Service. These organizations maintain their secretariats in the building occupied by the Public Administration Clearing House. All of them have been of assistance in the preparation of this directory, and the Clearing House acknowledges this indebtedness.

In the early stages of the preparation of this edition of the directory the editor was assisted by Mrs. Helen Baker. Jo Ann Mulford assisted in all phases of the preparation of this edition. Both rendered invaluable service.

The editor wishes also to acknowledge her indebtedness to Mrs. Lucile L. Keck, librarian, Joint Reference Library, for pointing out bibliographical and other sources, for putting the Bibliography in final form, and for preparing the section "National Organizations Classified by Fields of Activity."

Letters and comments received after the publication of the earlier editions of this directory led to the belief that the book was filling a genuine need and proving of service to those working in the field of public administration. The Public Administration Clearing House hopes that the present volume will be as favorably received and that through its use there will result a more extensive and complete utilization of the informational facilities, the powerful group loyalties, and the other resources of the organizations listed.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The complete names of the organizations have been used to alphabetize the summary statements. Inverted name or key-word cross reference lines, which facilitate the discovery of the full name of an organization if only the significant word in its title is recalled, have been inserted alphabetically throughout this section. However, particular attention is called to the fact that all of the national organizations have been classified by fields of activity in the classified section beginning on page 149.

REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Organizations listed in this section extend over several states. Organizations assigned to the same region do not necessarily have the same geographical scope. A regional organization may include members from only a few of the states within one of the four regions in which the group may have been placed. On the other hand a few of the organizations in this section recruit members from more than one of the four regions and in such cases the organization has been assigned to the region which contains the bulk of its membership.
